Life and Death: a Christian Medical Exploration of the Impact of Suicide

We will carefully and thoughtfully explore suicide—a complex and tragic issue that is a particular challenge for those working in psychiatry and healthcare. Engage with interactive and insightful sessions with specialists in the field and brothers and sisters In Christ, sensitively sharing from a combination of their professional and personal experiences. Join us as we discuss theological, cultural/societal, psychological, and occupational dimensions— including a Q&A conversation about the ethics of assisted suicide. There will also be opportunities for networking and reflection in a caring and supportive environment.

The conference is open to professionals of all ages and levels of experience and expertise.

We hope and trust there will also be opportunities for prayer during the day, offering moments to reach up to God, as we reach out to each other. Please do consider being part of this important and impactful 2025 CMF Psychiatry (in-person only) gathering.

SPEAKERS

Angharad Gray

Angharad is a CMF Psych Link

Dr Evelyn Sharpe

Evelyn is a retired consultant psychiatrist with experience in general adult psychiatry and serving people abroad in mission and aid work, who now works in pastoral care at her local church.

Rachael Newham

Rachel is an author and speaker specialising in the theology of mental health. She holds a Theology BA(Hons) and completed a research masters (MTh) entitled "Towards a Contemporary Pastoral Theology of Clinical Depression". Rachael founded and led Think Twice, a national charity delivering theology of mental health training, has experience as a chaplaincy assistant on an acute mental health unit, and has run a national church mental health project. She writes and speaks regularly on issues of faith and mental health and can be found as @RachaelNewham90 on social media

Dr Jonathan Haynes

Jonathan is a consultant psychiatrist, working for Gloucestershire Health & Care NHSFT. His clinical role is with an early intervention in psychosis team. He also works as Deputy Medical Director with responsibility for patient safety and quality; in this role he chairs reviews of deaths by suicide, and meets with bereaved families. He lives in Bristol and worships at Redland Church.

Mark Pickering

Mark is CMF Chief Executive and a secure environment GP, working regularly in secure forensic settings. He oversees CMF's public policy ministry, including on end of life issues.

Ruth Owusu-Ansah

Ruth is a registered mental health nurse (DIP HE) who previously worked for over 20 years in a medium secure unit in North London, as a forensic nurse. Ruth now works with adults with learning disabilities, autism and challenging behaviours, in a part time capacity.

Dr Ewan Goligher MD PhD

Ewan is an associate professor of medicine and physiology and a physician-scientist at the University of Toronto. He has kindly agreed to lead this session remotely via video from Canada. He practices critical care medicine and in that capacity is regularly involved in navigating ethical issues in end-of-life care with patients and their families. He has published on ethical issues surrounding physician-assisted death, freedom of conscience, and withholding/withdrawing life-sustaining measures. He is author of 'How Should We Then Die? A Christian Response to Physician-Assisted Death', from Lexham Press (2024).

Dr Jenny Bryden

Jenny Bryden is a consultant psychiatrist for an NHS trust in South East Scotland. She specialises in rehabilitation psychiatry and has a special interest in autism and ADHD in adults.
